Works in all HTML5 Ready browsers as it uses the download attribute of the element: function download(filename, text) { var element = document.createElement('a'); element.setAttribute('href', 'data:text/plain;charset=utf-8,' + encodeURIComponent(text)); element.setAttribute('download', filename); element.style.display = 'none'; document.body.appendChild(element); element.click(); document.body.removeChild(element); } // Start file download. If everything works well, this will download a file. If you need to save really large files larger than the blob size limitation or don't have enough RAM, then take a look at the more advanced StreamSaver.js which can save data directly to the hard disk asynchronously with the power of the new streams API. This attribute is only used if the href attribute is set. If you think about it, this is not as secure as you think and should not be allowed without user interaction (however, it is now allowed). var zip = new JSZip(); zip.file("Hello.txt", "Hello World"); zip.GenerateAsync({type: "blob"}) .then(function(content) { // see FileSaver.js saveAs(content, "file.zip"); }); Now let's go deeper. Generate and download a file using Javascript ? See ChenWenBrian and koffsyrup's saveTextAs() for details. var zip = new JSZip(); Add a file with a Hello World text: zip.file("hello.txt", "Hello World"); Download the file with the name archive.zip.GenerateAsync({type: "blob"}).then(function(zip) { saveAs(zip, "archive.zip"); }); Read more here: Self-implemented download function The following simple function allows you to generate a file download directly in the browser without contacting any server. In this article we are going to show you a couple of tricks to generate and directly a file using pure JavaScript. None Safari < 6 data: URI No n/a Blob.js Note: although it supports most recent ones there are a couple of tricks you need to know to provide full support. Using the MIME type application/octet-stream to force downloads can cause problems in Safari. IE < 10 It is possible to save text files in IE < 10 without Flash-based polyfills. Have fun! Dependencies 2.32K GitHub Stars 19.05K Forks 4.3K Contributors 60 The npm package filesaver.js-npm receives a total of 388 downloads per week. Create an instance of JSZip. Safari 6.1+ Blobs can be opened instead of saved sometimes; you may need to tell your Safari users to manually press ?+S to save the file after opening it. However, in the latest browsers, unknown or rarely downloaded file extensions are blocked and a warning appears if you really want to open that file (at least in Chrome). You know how this story ends. Imagine that you are using Google Chrome and have the option “Automatically open downloaded files” enabled, and for your bad luck you enter a malicious website and generate the download of an unknown file. Based on the project statistics from the GitHub repository for the npm filesaver.js-npm package, we find that it has been starred 19,048 times, and that 2,316 other projects in the ecosystem depend on it. Learn how to generate a file using javascript in your browser and download it directly without using any server (local solution). You can see this fragment in action in the following violin: Using a library Create libraries, not war. Downloads are calculated as rolling averages for the last 12 months, excluding weekends and missing data points.
